Monday evening, Oct. 29, promises to be a gay evening in Marshall's social circles when the Ariel Quartet will make its first public appearance with Prof. Ittger as pianist. They will be assisted by Robert Ward, elocutionist; Henry Pate in "Trocha," a Cuban selection and Miss Clara Brown, who has been selected by this young quartet, will be the vocalist for the evening.

The Ariel Quartet is composed of four boys ranging in age from 12 to 18 years. They are Leland and Charles Viley, Horace and Joseph Leonard, all of whom are gifted in a musical way and have been studying and playing together for years. Their music has not only been a great pleasure to their friends but to themselves as well.

Their selections will all be new, bright and catchy, several pieces having been arranged specially for this entertainment. Prof. Ittger, chief director upon this occasion, has been untiring in his efforts towards making this entertainment a complete success, and there should not be standing room in the opera house upon Monday evening, Oct. 29th.

A Trip to the Pinnacles.

The following young people formed a pleasant party who went to the Pinnacles on Saturday morning. They left Marshall at eight o'clock and the drive there and back proved a most enjoyable one while the big basket of dinner prepared by the young ladies was no small feature of the delightful day. Misses Fannie Cordell, Lucy Bell, Lottie Armentrout, May Minor, Emma and Helen Fisher, Messrs George Davis, Will Armentrout and Montgomery Leonard formed the party.

New York Store Entertained.

The proprietors of the New York Store are no doubt wishing for another democratic rally, as it will be sometime before they forget the pleasures of last Friday, when an elegant dinner was spread in the cloak room on the second floor by their friends. Mr. and Mrs. Dave Vanmeter, William Bates and wife, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Vanmeter, who brought such a dinner as people in town seldom see, and they entertained royally. This dinner consisted of delicious chicken, cooked to a golden brown, old country ham sweet and juicy, such as few people of today understand the art of curing, good butter and snowy bread, with stacks of chocolate, mince and transparent pies, with light flakey pastry that would bring a flush to the majority of cooks, when compared to what they serve for pie. A variety of pickles and other good things to eat made up this dinner that made us hungry to even hear of it.

Baptist Association.

The Baptist State Association convened at Columbia this week, when the following persons from Marshall attended: L. P. Viley, C. M. Buckner, Rev. J. F. Kemper, Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham, Mesdames Florence Griffith, R. T. Brightwell, John Reynolds, S. M. Taylor, Jane Huff and Annie Irvine of Fairville.

The people of Columbia are noted for their hospitality and those attending from Marshall expect not only a profitable but pleasant time socially.

Reading Circle.

The Epworth League reading circle of the Methodist church, South, had an interesting meeting on Monday night with Pierce Bewley on Reilman avenue. Roll call was responded to by news items, after which the first chapters of the following books, which are being studied by the circle, were taken up: "Life of the Seventh Earl of Shaftsbury" and "Entering on Life," were discussed with Mr. Bewley and Miss Sarah Martin as leaders. It being the custom of the circle to take up the study of some author with their other work, Bryan was the author who interested the company upon this occasion, each member giving a quotation from same, at the close of which a pleasant time socially was had.

A Handsome Window.

Mrs. O. W. Johnston of this city deserves special mention for the taste displayed in the decorations of O. W. Johnston's window on Friday, the day of the big democratic rally. The dining table decorated in autumn leaves, with white satin ribbon suspended from the corners to the chandelier above, was indeed a pretty sight, to say nothing of the dainty dishes of salted almonds, peppermint wafers and large bowl of fruit that adorned the sideboard that were quite as delicious as they looked. The large picture of William J. Bryan, framed in white chrysanthemums, occupied a prominent place in this pretty dining room and attracted considerable attention.
